ABSTRACT

This booklet, compiled by three experts in children's recordings, provides a selected list of records and cassettes which can accommodate a broad range of informational and recreational requirements of children. Some of the subjects covered are children's songs and folk music, orchestral music, popular music, holidays, natural sciences and space are documentaries, and literature, including folk and fairy tales, stories, and poetry. The criteria for selecting the recordings included effectiveness, aesthetics, broad appeal, and execution. Adaptations and dramatizations were selected only when they could transform the true qualities of the book and its characters; song albums were selected for their natural appeal. Documentary and miscellaneous recordings were selected on the basis of a wide interest range. Recordings which appeared patronizing, biased, or ethnically stereotyped were not included. A directory of distributors appears in the booklet. (Author/LLS)

INTRODUCTION

Today's children's librarians have the task of growing to meet the needs of a media oriented public. Recordings are one of our most valuable media resources. They provide flexible, exciting auditory experiences and are relatively inexpensive for todays ever shrinking budget.

Librarians often find that they are better able to introduce a vast amount of subject matter to non-readers, as well as inspired interpretations of children's favorites to readers through recordings.

With the reality of the spoken word, thoughts and actions of great personalities in history become alive and vivid in the child's mind. Through both musical and non-musical recordings children are exposed to a rich heritage of other cultures enabling the child to experience personal growth and cultural pride.

The committee has compiled a list of recordings which will accommodate a broad range of informational and recreational requirements of children. The criteria for selected recordings are their effectiveness, aesthetics and broad appeal, as well as being executed with integrity and respect for children. Adaptations and dramatizations have been selected only when they can transform the true qualities of the book and its characters. Song albums have been selected for their natural appeal. A group of documentary and miscellaneous recordings which have a wide interest range have also been included. In compiling this list, the committee has attempted to avoid recordings which appeared patronizing as well as those which were biased or ethnically stereotyped.
